THE ROSEMOND REPORT

Dear Parents,

After all of our Halloween activities, we are now back to a few “straight” learning weeks before Thanksgiving Break. Our First Trimester ends in just two weeks, and I know too that there are always final assignments and tests given. Some families may wish to check Option C to be sure all is handed in before final grades are issued. Perhaps the time change and darker evenings may help students keep some evening focus on extra study and review?

This Wednesday, there will be school pictures retaken for those who need them for the yearbook. Students who missed the original day or who need to have their picture taken may be out of uniform.

I will have the pleasure of spending time out of the office while seeing your children in their classrooms as I begin formal classroom observations this week and next. I’m sure I’ll have some good stories!

Yours in Christ,

Marianne Rosemond
